Major wilderness photo show opens in Warren

WARREN — A monthlong wilderness photography show opens in Warren today as part of the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the 1964 Wilderness Act, which established the nation's Wilderness Preservation System. The show honors the late Howard Zahniser, a Tionesta resident who was the executive director of the Wilderness Society and a primary author of the 1964 Wilderness Act.

The opening reception for the show, "Wilderness at 50: Photographic Reflections on the Legacy of Tionesta Visionary Howard Zahniser," will be held at 2 p.m. in the Crary Art Gallery, 511 Market St. It is free and open to the public.

The exhibit includes an array of photographs from the U.S. National Wilderness Preservation System by renowned photographers, including Clyde Butcher, David Muench and Robert Glenn Ketchum.

Parking is available on the street and at the Warren County Courthouse lot.
